Listen and read

City or country?

- 3a (10) 1.1 Listen to and/or read some comments that people made following an online radio discussion programme. Where does each listener think is better: the city (C), the country (CO) or it depends (D)?
  - b Which listener:
    - 1 thinks travelling by bus or train is a bad thing? C
    - 2 talks about how much more space you have in the country? ____
    - 3 mentions children playing outside? ____
    - 4 feels that it depends on where you can find work rather than on what you prefer? ____
    - 5 mentions interaction with other people?
    - 6 criticises people who live in the city? _
    - 7 thinks the country provides a good social life? _
    - 8 mentions moving to the country in the future?

A

I've lived in a big city here in Brazil for the last ten years, but I was brought up in the country. I much prefer living in a big conurbation like this as I think it teaches you tolerance. In your day-to-day life, you come into contact with a whole host of different types of people, and you get to understand their situation a lot better than if you lived a closed off, more sheltered life in the country. Fernanda, Brazil

B

Country for me, every time. Here, we have space to live our lives like real people. I can go for a walk in the fresh air, my dog has plenty of space to run around in and we can see the stars at night. What you city folk don't understand is that we don't have to live on top of each other, and were never meant to. Stuart, UK

C

It's much cheaper to live in the country. In terms of property prices, for the same amount as a onebedroom apartment in New York, I could afford a four-bedroom house with a garden and a pool here. And that's just the start. My grocery bill is much cheaper, as are eating out and entertaining. I can afford to drive a car, so I don't have to rely on public transport, either. All in all, it's a better quality of life here.

Anthony, USA

If you want any kind of social life, then you have to live in the city.

Adalene, Paris, France

Ε

In my country, it's often a case of necessity. In the countryside, the air is clean and fresh, it's much more polluted in the cities, so that's a benefit of living rurally, but there just isn't any work there. For me, quality of life depends on finding work. Since I'm an engineer, this has to be the city for now. Henu, Indonesia

F

I would say any discussion of whether one is better than the other just oversimplifies the issue. When I was little, for example, I used to love living in the country. I could go and play for hours in the fields and forests near where we lived. In the summer holidays, I would go out with friends on our bikes and only come back for dinner. But as I got older, I found there just wasn't enough to do, and it was pretty dull, so I moved to Toronto, which is much more exciting. I can see myself moving back to the country when I'm older and I want to settle down and maybe have kids myself. So surely it depends more on your age than anything else? Chris, Canada

G

People talk to each other more in the country. In the village where I live, every time you leave your house you'll see one of your neighbours, and we always stop and say 'hello', and have a chat. Not only that, but we have regular get-togethers, such as the village barbecue, in the summer. You really feel part of a community, and you just don't get that in the city. Cathy, Ireland

H

I have two small children, and wouldn't dream of bringing them up in the city. Every day, the news is full of reports of children going missing, violent attacks, robberies, and the like. It seems to me that you can't go out of your front door in the city without facing some kind of danger. No, it's much better to bring up children in the country, where they can play outside without fear.

Graham, Sydney, Australia

Grammar

Introducing points in an argument

- 7a Read the text below about global tourism. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as an effect of the increase in tourism?
  - 1 poor working conditions
  - 2 ecological damage
  - 3 unemployment

Tourism is the world's biggest industry. In 2010, there were just over a billion tourists worldwide; this number is expected to rise to 1.6 billion by 2020. With improved transport, cheaper flights and increased leisure time, many of the countries of the developing world are rapidly becoming tourist meccas. Since the 1960s, mass tourism has become increasingly specialised, encompassing sporting and adventure holidays as well as ecological tours. Although the tourist industry employs more than 235 million people worldwide, the benefits of tourism are not always felt at a local level, where jobs are often low paid and menial. Unregulated growth of tourism is also causing both environmental and social damage.

- b Complete the sentences with the information in the text.
  - 1 The main consideration is whether the growth of tourism actually helps people .
  - 2 One explanation for the growth in tourism is _____

3 Another reason for the growth in tourism is _____

- 4 The most worrying problem of increasing tourism might be that

A tale of two countries

- A The first thing that struck me was that everything was so small. The roads were really narrow, and the traffic weaved its way between tall, thin buildings, which looked like they'd been squeezed into the street like wafers in a chocolate biscuit. The elongated, red, double-decker buses snaked carefully between the avenues and main roads, picking up and dropping off their fares like ants on their way to fulfilling their daily purpose, whatever that might be. It felt really strange, as though I was looking at the world through odd-coloured spectacles although I was seeing the same, familiar street corners and places that I'd known for most of my life, this time they didn't feel familiar.
- B It was so different to how I'd expected it to be. I'd loved most of the two years I'd spent in Volgograd, in the south of Russia, but in those last few months I'd realised that what made me enjoy it was partly and it was a large part the knowledge that I'd soon be returning home, to the family and friends I knew and loved, and the milder (though still often awful) weather London had to offer. The time I'd spent on the steppe had been a real eye-opener as far as experiencing a different culture was concerned. When I'd first arrived, fresh off the plane at Sheremetyevo Airport in Moscow, I'd been all too eager to make friends, and went out of my way to be polite wherever I could. Most of the time, my attempts to strike up conversation were met with icy stares and brusque, one-word replies. I'd started to think that Russians were a cold people, and I was unlikely to ever make any new friends.
- C 'I think you're not having a good time here' was how Ludmilla, the secretary at the school where I was working, invited me for dinner with her family. 'You will come for dinner with my family on Sunday, I won't take no for an answer.' I was so relieved. When I turned up, flowers and wine in hand, I was enveloped in warm handshakes, inviting hugs, warm laughter and murmurs of 'ochen priyatna' (very pleased to meet you). The meal was eaten, a few toasts were drunk and by the end we were discussing our deepest wishes, fears and hopes for the future. Whether that was partly due to the vodka we drank, I'm not sure, but I do know it was largely because Russians are actually warm, friendly people, but just too proud to wear their hearts on their sleeves with people they don't know.
- D Another thing I'd learnt about Russians is the way the men show their respect for women, both young and old. One day, I had a rather unfortunate incident on the bus. I'd been sitting there, minding my own business, deeply engrossed in the book I was reading, when I started to notice a quiet murmuring all around me. I looked around, and noticed how the people to my left and behind me were looking across at me with disdain and whispering to each other. In front of me was a young woman, looking at me in disgust. Just when I was about to ask, in my broken (at that point crippled, in fact) Russian if something was wrong, a man in front of me got up and offered his seat to the young woman, whose face transformed in an instant to an angelic smile as she accepted, and sat down. I had been so ashamed I got off at the next stop and walked the extra six blocks home.
- E Now, back in London, this place that used to feel like home but now looked somewhat artificial, I had suddenly found myself in the same position. There I was on the bus, and a smartlydressed, young woman got on. Looking round, I noticed with a panic that there were no other seats free. Proud of what I'd learnt, I eagerly leapt to my feet and offered my seat. When she looked surprised and told me she was 'OK, thanks', I was mortified. I felt like a balloon that had deflated prematurely, and I instantly blushed bright red. Once more, I got off early and walked. It was going to take a while to get back into the swing

The Hundred-Year-Old Man Who Climbed Out the Window and Disappeared

One of the best books I've read this year is called The Hundred-Year-Old Man Who Climbed Out the Window and Disappeared, by Jonas Jonasson, which was recommended to me by a friend. It's a fictional tale, and the main story is set in Sweden. It tells the story of Allan Karlsson, the protagonist, as he goes on a journey across the country, leaving a trail of chaos behind him. It also tells the story of his earlier life in parallel.

The story opens as Allan is about to celebrate his 100th birthday at the retirement home where he lives. Despite his age, he is both physically and mentally alert, and so he decides to climb out of the window and 'disappear'. He gets hold of a suitcase full of money, and ends up being pursued by both drug dealers and the police. On his way across the country, he teams up with people he meets on the way, and we learn about their interesting – and rather odd – lives. There are several subplots throughout the story, which involve Allan's earlier life, including meeting President Truman, Winston Churchill, Mao Zedong, and how he invented the atom bomb. Little by little, you realise that he was actually behind some of the most important events of the twentieth century.

It's an unapologetically hilarious book, which makes you laugh out loud in places. Some of the events are beyond belief, but it's enjoyable nonetheless, and very heartwarming, and you'll very quickly fall in love with the main characters. But behind the comedy, it leaves you with a feeling that anything is possible, and we are all truly in charge of our own destinies. As the protagonist himself says, 'Anything can be achieved through the power of positive thinking'.

I won't give away the ending completely, but suffice to say it all ends happily. Both the drug dealers and the police eventually catch up with Allan, but as to what happens when they do, well, you'll have to read the book for yourself and find out.

Mobile affluenza clinics

The Delhi-based charity End Affluenza Now has this week launched a fleet of 'mobile affluenza clinics', with the aim of reaching out to India's emerging middle classes in order to educate 5 them about the perils of what is seen as a very them about the penis of what is seen as a very 21st-century 'disease'. The organisation hopes that by likening the condition to a disease, bringing it out into the open, naming it and generally de-mystifying it, they can help raise awareness of what they argue is one of the widest-reaching 'afflictions' of our time. So what is 'affluenza'? The organisation describes it as a form of extreme materialism, resulting in the need to accumulate wealth

- 15 and consumer goods at a scale which is out of control. In its most extreme form, it's known as 'sudden-wealth syndrome' and often experienced by people who have made or won large amounts of money (such as
- 20 lottery winners). Many sufferers feel that their financial success leaves them with an empty feeling, which can only be fulfilled with the accumulation of more wealth, which in turn becomes a self-perpetuating spiral. In the
- <sup>25</sup> past, it was only a concern for the very richest levels of society, but in a country where the average salary has risen by 14 percent over the last decade (18 percent for IT professionals), combined with a push towards aggressive
- 30 marketing by the world's major brands into this 'promising' new economy, it now affects an estimated 40 percent of the population. 'Symptoms' of the disease include
- workaholism, or finding more and more of your time consumed by a job you hate, low
- self-esteem, an addiction to chaos, aiming to buy consumer goods which you derive little or no satisfaction from, and a false sense of entitlement.
- <sup>40</sup> Sceptics argue that the country has far more pressing issues to deal with than this. 'It's ludicrous that time and resources are being spent on these pathetic issues, when there are people in different parts of the country struggling to feed
- their families every day, or without access to clean drinking water,' says Shriya Dutta, a community outreach worker. 'Perhaps those worried about whether they can afford that new 50-inch TV should think about donating some of that money to more worthwhile causes.'

The organisation's strategy with the mobile clinics is twofold. Firstly, they hope to raise awareness of the problem and its effects. Secondly, they aim to offer practical advice in <sup>55</sup> order to help families reclaim fulfilment with their 'real lives'. This advice includes, among other tips, using cash or debit cards rather than credit cards to limit spending, keeping records of what you spend, and using them in order to form realistic budgets, planning shopping trips to avoid impulse buys, and following the 'three Rs' – Reuse, Repair, Recycle.

Reactions so far have been mixed. While some have found the advice a useful antidote

- to the inescapable daily bombardment of bigbrand marketing, others are less hopeful. 'It's all very well them telling us to work less,' says Jitesh Chopra, a systems analyst from Mumbai, 'but if I don't put in the hours, then someone
- ro else will, and before I know it, I'll be out of a job. What's needed is a more wide-reaching change, that cuts to the heart of society as we know it.'

Elementary, my dear Watson

Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson were having a camping holiday in the countryside. On their final evening, they decided to go to bed as soon as they had finished their simple meal, as they were leaving early the next morning. Some time later, Watson woke up. He saw his friend was lying awake, staring at the stars. He had obviously been doing this for some time.

Watson,' said Holmes, 'I have been studying the stars for the last ten minutes and I have just made a brilliant deduction. Before I tell you what it is, look up at the stars and tell me what you see.'

Watson thought for a moment. 'Well, the stars are shining brightly, which means it will probably be a wonderful day tomorrow.'

'No, not that,' said Holmes. 'Try again.'

'Let me see ... I observe that the Moon is at an angle of 65 degrees, and will be setting in approximately one hour. 1 therefore deduce that the time is approximately 2.25 a.m.'

'No, not that either,' said Holmes. 'Try again.'

'Um ... in another five hours, we will have been on holiday for exactly one week.'

'You idiot, Watson. Some thief has stolen our tent!'

c Find words or phrases in the extracts that mean:

- 1 difficult (para A) tough
- 2 a way of describing how far a car has travelled, used here to refer to age (para B) _____
- 3 your general attitude to life (para B)
- 4 a really positive feeling (para C)
- 5 absorb your surroundings (para D)

70 is the new 60, so they say, and with average life expectancy more than double what it was just over 100 years ago, there's no escaping the fact that we are now living longer. But there are some people who take that even further, proving that age really is no limit to what you can achieve. Meet some people who think they've found the secret to staying young.

Örvendek! Pleased to meet you! A few years back, I went on a sightseeing holiday to Budapest, and I instantly fell in love with this beautiful city. I loved everything about it – the history, culture, people. So I decided to try learning the language. It was really tough at first, as Hungarian is very different from most other European languages in the way words are formed and the grammatical cases, so I was learning quite a lot of rather new concepts. But I've kept it up, and nowadays I use online video chat to have lessons twice a week with a teacher based in Hungary. She's quite strict with me and sets me regular homework (it's like being back at school again sometimes!), but it's great and keeps my mind active. I also think I've proved that it's never too late to learn something new! Richard, 71

For me it's all about the company you keep. I have a great group of friends, all of whom are 'young'. By that I don't mean they have fewer miles on the clock than me (in fact the opposite is true), but that they simply have a fresh attitude to things. You won't ever hear any of them say things like 'I'm too old for that' or 'you wouldn't catch me doing that at my age'. We all share the same outlook – that it's there for living, so we get together every week and try something new. Last week we went bowling, and this week we're going to try paintballing! You can look back at what's happened to you over the years, or you can look ahead at the years to come. I choose the latter. Agata, 67

It sounds obvious, I know, but the best way to stay young and healthy is exercise. I started running in my late fifties, and I still run now, but not as far as I used to. I go twice or three times a week and usually manage about three kilometres. I love it – it's like a lifeline for me. My doctor says I have the metabolism and physical fitness of a 50-year-old, but it's not just that it keeps my body in shape and working, it's what it does for me mentally, too. The buzz you get when you get the blood moving round the body like this is when you feel truly alive, and I think that's the same whatever your age is. My advice to other people my age would be to get outside and get moving, even if it's only a short distance each day. Mike, 69

When I retired a few years ago, I'd never been abroad. I'd always wanted to visit Rome, and try Italian food in Italy. I'd heard so much about it from my children and it sounded wonderful, so a couple of years back, I thought 'What the heck!' and booked a two-week holiday. Needless to say I had a great time. I loved everything about it – the sights, the food, the people, the feeling of immersing yourself in another culture. Well, since then, I've 'caught the bug', as they say, and I've been all over Europe. The only thing that holds me back is my pension. I love travelling and I think this time of life is a great time to do it. There's less pressure to get to see all the places you think you have to, and more time to relax and soak up the atmosphere. My dream now is to visit somewhere further afield. I'd love to visit Japan, for example. Clara, 68

Nosey questions

- 4a 10 5.1 Listen to and/or read the text below. Where do you think it comes from?
  - 1 a book giving advice for people visiting the UK for the first time
  - 2 the advice column of a teenage magazine
  - 3 a book of humorous articles
  - 4 a book of advice about social etiquette

Nosey questions

If someone you know asks you nosey questions, then you are not obliged to answer if you don't want to. Here it is more important that you have some polite brush-off*, but it is still not rude for you to refuse and it would be rude for the other person to press you.

If you think they shouldn't have asked the question ('How much money do you earn?', 'Are you pregnant yet?', 'Are you and John still in love?'), then I strongly recommend looking very shocked and saying 'I can't believe you just asked me that!' and either leaving them to stumble out of it or moving on yourself to another, perhaps related, subject. If they try to press you, as opposed to defending themselves lamely and saying 'I was just interested ...', then you can keep the shocked look and say 'I'm not telling you that' with as much emphasis as you like on the 'you'.

But what if the question isn't quite so unforgivable? You don't want to answer it ('How much did you pay for that?', 'Are you having a relationship with him?', 'Where did you buy that?' - these are strictly subjective examples, by the way: you can decide for yourself what questions go into what categories). Or supposing the really awful question came from someone you don't feel you can be too hard on (elderly relative, boss). Then you need a more smiling response: 'I can't possibly tell you that' or 'I'm not telling anyone that' or 'Wouldn't you like to know?' or 'That's none of your business'. Any of these, if said with a cheerful face, should get you out of it. As ever, if people press, then they have lost the right to a polite answer. Some people really don't understand why you won't tell them. 'But I'd tell you,' they say. You must just answer 'I never tell anyone that kind of thing' until they get the message. But you must stand firm, because otherwise they'll never learn and will keep expecting you to tell them your innermost secrets. There is certainly never any need to tell your secrets just because someone else told theirs.

There are questions that seem perfectly reasonable – 'Are you planning to move?', 'Are you going to go back to work?', 'Are you going on holiday this year?' – but if answered truthfully might lead to minefields or unexpected (and maybe unwanted) revelations of bankruptcy, pregnancy, redundancy, divorce, etc. Here you are free to tell white lies and say 'We don't know / haven't decided yet / haven't really thought about it'. Looking vague and serene and changing the subject is the key here. You generally find that people did leap to conclusions, but they were the wrong ones ('I was convinced that meant you were getting married, not splitting up') and nothing to worry about. If the question was reasonable, then it's polite to embarrass the asker as little as possible – they were probably only making conversation in the first place.

Distance learning

distance learning n [U] a method of study that involves using electronic means (computers, Internet, etc.) to receive and send work rather than going to a school or university

Knowledge, according to the proverb, is power. And in this electronic age, more and more of our information is gained not in the classroom, but via media such as the Internet, DVD and cable TV ... all of which are playing a key part in the distance learning revolution. Here are three figures in this key educational change which is transforming our lives in the 21st century.

The Pitman shorthand system

Those who think that distance learning is a relatively new idea might be surprised to learn that English educator, Sir Isaac Pitman, had the same idea – only then they were called correspondence courses – more than 150 years ago. Taking advantage of the development of a reliable postal system in 1840, Pitman began teaching shorthand by mail to thousands of students who did not have time to attend school. '____, and posting them to Mr Pitman to be corrected. His brother, Benn Pitman, introduced the idea to the United States, and the Pitman shorthand system – which has been adapted to fifteen other languages – is still one of the most widely used shorthand systems in the world.

*a system for writing down what people are saying using special signs to represent words, letters and phrases

The Open University

When it was established in 1969, the Open University offered courses via mail, with the back-up of regular TV and radio programmes shown outside normal broadcast times.  $^{2}$ ____, and in group sessions in the evenings or at weekends.

Thirty years on, the Open University has expanded to include the Internet, video-conferencing, satellite broadcast and email. There are no entry qualifications or admission interviews, and anyone over the age of 18 can follow one of their courses. It is now Britain's largest single teaching institution, with more than 200,000 people studying its courses every year, with another 16,000 in other countries around the world.

John Hendricks and the Discovery Channel

After a successful career in university education, John S. Hendricks entered the TV business and launched the Discovery Channel –  $^3$  — in June 1985. Today, the company's programmes reach over 150 million subscribers in more than a hundred countries. In an age where competition for TV audiences has never been tougher, the Discovery Channel's high-quality, educational approach continues to defy those who believe that TV is only about mindless entertainment. The BBC programme Walking with Dinosaurs became the most-watched documentary in TV history when it was shown on the Discovery Channel in 2000.

Nicole Kidman

- A A single working mother in her midthirties, Nicole Kidman could have either slipped into career apathy or forged ahead stubbornly. It will surprise no one that she opted for the latter, and quite spectacularly so. As she carved out a new persona, complete with both feminist and romantic overtones, not to mention a major image overhaul, the world took the courageous actress to its heart. Almost by default, the divorcee became an inspirational role model for women everywhere.
- B Setting out to prove the point that she could get along just fine without her famous husband, yet admitting on occasion that she was struggling to cope, Nicole's frankness was refreshing and appealing in equal measure. She never stopped giving interviews and her gradual acceptance of her new life could be clearly traced as the year progressed.
- C After eleven years of wearing flat shoes to avoid towering over Tom Cruise, the statuesque star famously charmed her public by gleefully giggling 'I can wear heels now!' when quizzed on the benefits of being single. Suddenly she became a style icon for a new generation.
- D Clothes shopping with girlfriends was now one of her favourite pursuits. But Nicole's sartorial tastes hadn't actually changed all that much from the days she spent trawling round flea markets'. 'I think clothes are creative. It's wonderful when someone like John Galliano has the ability to change the way people think of clothes or how they dress on a global level. Fashion is incredibly relevant. There's something admirable about boldness, because with boldness comes the opportunity to fail. But it's becoming harder now, because when you fail, people judge it so severely.'

- E A practical mum, Nicole is a 'bike shorts and sloppy joe' person around the house.
  'It's like leading two different lives,' she jokes.'I have my life, then I have this sort of fantasy life – going to premieres and putting on make-up and beautiful dresses.'
- F Thanks to all the extra exposure with Moulin Rouge!, The Others and also her very public divorce, Nicole's eclectic taste in clothes, her paleness and her long-legged figure have become fashionable, something which she finds most amusing. 'Believe me, my body is only OK,' she laughs. 'I get by, but it's not great. I have a boy's body, and I would rather look like a girl. Moulin Rouge! was all about corsets and padding.'

More time online means less sleep

There's no doubt that over the past decade, social media has opened up a whole new world of communication, as well as a wealth of new possibilities for  $1 _$  meeting (meet) people and making contacts. However, <sup>2</sup>_____ (use) it too much appears <sup>3</sup>_____ (have) a negative effect on how we sleep. A recent study among young adults in the north of England shows that people who use social media a lot have more problems <sup>4</sup>___ _____ (sleep).

The survey, conducted as part of a TV documentary, asked one thousand 20–25-year-olds <sup>5</sup>_____ (keep) a record of how often they posted messages and commented on other people's posts, and to then answer a series of questions about their sleep patterns. Those participants who posted more than twenty-five times a day were found <sup>6</sup>_ (have) a much higher rate and variety of sleep problems.

It's thought that this trend is linked to the rise in ownership of mobile devices, which people often use in bed. As Kasey Griffiths, one of the participants in the research, recounts, 'One time I went to bed with my phone, and went onto a site, commenting on a friend's post. I think he misunderstood my message and we ended up <sup>7</sup>_ (have) a bit of a row. By the time we had explained and made up again, it was 4 a.m.' Other people in the survey reported <sup>8</sup>_____ (be) woken up by alerts, then not being able to get back to sleep after <sup>9</sup>___ _____ (reply).

'Part of the problem is the method of communication,' explains Ted Wells, the producer of the programme. 'It's often more difficult <sup>10</sup>_____ (express) yourself online than it is face-to-face. This means that the problems in already stressful relationships are often made worse.'

Daggers drawn

My daughter was singing as she polished the furniture. I hadn't asked her to polish the furniture. I never do. But where one brother is happiest with the computer, one with a football and one with a model car, her idea of bliss is a can of Spring Fresh and a duster. Where have I gone wrong?

While the boys have to be nagged, bribed or tricked into doing their infinitesimal share of the household chores, and can't be seen when they think they're finished, she's up on a chair with the washing-up liquid before you can say 'dishes', scrubbing at pans as if her life depended on it.

Being a bit of a tomboy myself, and not too hot on the domestic skills, I used to argue till I was blue in the face that the differences between men and women were all about upbringing and expectations. Nobody could have approached motherhood with a grittier determination that all children would be treated the same, not channelled along some pre-ordained path. Boys would be offered soft toys to cuddle, girls would play with cars and trains. I would breed the New Men and female engineers of the future.

I dare say there are indeed small boys and girls who do such things, but not mine. The hubris awaiting me was a family in which every politically incorrect stereotype in the book is rife.

Ten years ago, as I gazed at my first-born in his cradle, I fantasised about the gentle soul he would be. No guns or nasty aggression for this little peach blossom. He would be taught to turn away wrath with a swift word. He would grow up to be Secretary General of the United Nations.

The fantasy sustained me until he was about two, when he proudly presented me with his first model – a rifle. Later on, at playgroup, he and his pals daily assassinated each other. In the garden, he and his brother began doing such heart-stopping things with sticks that in the end I bought them a couple of plastic swords.

We went downhill fast. A decade and three more sons after those early children, we now house an arsenal of swords, rifles, water pistols, bows and arrows, hatchets, daggers and tanks that would be the envy of the British Army. Not so long ago, we were all nearly arrested when a most life-like revolver in our luggage caused a security scare at Heathrow Airport.

And what of my daughter, the lone sandwiched sister? She plays all the boys' games because she has to. You'll find her from time to time teetering around the house in plastic high heels, with a handbag (pink) in one hand and a shotgun in the other, and she can manage a tolerable dribble down the left wing when they need someone to make up the numbers for football. But her heart is not really in it. She would much rather be drawing or writing or cutting out stars or polishing shells or – dear heavens – cleaning the bathroom while waves of boys surge and roar around her.

I finally faced up to the fact that boys and girls are simply born different on the day, a few years ago, when I was hanging out the washing and gave her and the next brother up a couple of clothes pegs to play with. He shot me with his. She cradled it in her arms and sang it a lullaby.

But I won't give up. I'll continue to try and treat them equally and expect the same of them. And by the time they're all in their teens, I imagine they'll all be equally impossible to get to do anything. But right now, nature is wearing down nurture. Equality is hard work.

  - a Use the Internet to develop critical thinking skills
  - b Take control of passwords
  - c Don't be alone
  - d Make the most of smartphones
  - e Embrace video
- c Are these sentences true (T) or false (F), according to the text?
  - 1 Technology brings both benefits and dangers for children.  $\underline{\mathcal{T}}$
  - 2 Children should be able to change the wi-fi password after they've done their chores.
  - 3 Video chat can make up for family being a long way away.
  - 4 Children won't want to respond to text messages if they're out with friends.
  - 5 Finding useful things on your child's phone with them is a good opportunity to spend time together. ____
  - 6 The Internet is never a reliable source of information.
  - 7 One disadvantage of technology is that it can make parents feel isolated. ____

5 WAYS PARENTS CAN USE TECHNOLOGY

Parents are often warned of the perils of modern technology for their children. Not only do they need to make sure children stay safe online, limit the amount of time they spend playing video games, as well as screen time in general, but also avoid falling into the 'communication trap', whereby kids start to favour written over oral communication. While these are all real concerns, very little is said about the benefits technology can bring to parents themselves. Although many core values and aims are the same, modern parenting often requires a different approach than it did for our parents' generation. It's not about completely changing the game, but there are a few ways in which tech-savvy parents can use modern technology to their advantage.

Take control of passwords

One way of ensuring the kids help with housework is to change the household wi-fi password every morning (or the night before). Give your children a list of simple chores to do before they can have access to it, e.g. make the bed, take the rubbish out, etc.

Video chat can be an excellent way of keeping in touch with the extended family, especially if they live on the other side of the world. It's unlikely that grandparents will be there for every school performance, or when that tooth comes out, but with video chat they'll be able to see it. Rather than your child telling them over the phone, they can show them over the Internet.

Texting is a great way to stay in touch with teenagers while they're out with friends. A simple 'How's it going?' can be much less invasive than a phone call, and easier for them to respond to, especially if they want to avoid the embarrassment of mum or dad checking up on them when they're with friends. And that's not to mention the benefits of maps, taxi apps, etc. Taking time to look for and download apps with your child is a great way to spend some time together in an activity which he or she will find motivating, too.

There's a wealth of information out there on the Internet, but not all of it is reliable. Set your child simple tasks, by picking up on rumours they've heard (about celebrities, for example) and asking them to see if they can find at least three sources which say the same thing. Ask them to tell you which they think is most reliable, and why. Developing these skills will go a long way in helping prepare your child for today's modern world.

It can be easy to feel isolated as a parent sometimes, especially when it's 'them against you'. Luckily, nowadays there are a myriad of forums and online communities out there which can help you with both moral and practical support. Sometimes you won't even need to join a community, and can often find discussions on quite complex subjects with a simple Internet search. The important thing to remember is that you're not alone, and technology makes this more possible than ever before.

Believe it or not

4a 10.1 Listen to and/or read the articles. They all appeared in tabloid newspapers and claim to be true. Which stories do you think are true?

Believe it or not

- A Brittney Pringle, a nine-month-old baby from Perth, Australia, made her parents rich the moment she spoke her first words. 'Brittney gave us a couple of goo-goos and ga-gas and then blurted out the numbers 9, 12, 14, 22, 31 and 39,' says proud mum, Dorcas Pringle. 'We ran out and bought the lottery ticket – and now our Brittney's going to grow up as the world's youngest self-made millionaire. I can't explain how she did what she did, but we are determined she's going to lead a normal life.'
- B New Yorker Alvin Eykers is divorcing his wife Judith because her psychic powers put too much strain on their marriage. 'She'd finish my sentences before I got the words halfway out of my mouth,' says Eykers. 'I could never surprise her with a gift for Christmas or her birthday and I could never get away with even the littlest white lie. It was like she had a peephole into my mind.' The crisis came when Judith accused him of having an affair with his firm's receptionist. Eykers insists, 'I haven't touched her or even said two words to her – yet.'
- C A British motorist lost her way during a day trip to Calais and drove 800 miles across Europe looking for somewhere to turn round. Vivienne Vanderwault-Hudson, who had been shopping for cigarettes and alcohol, headed down the motorway, crossed the Pyrenees into Spain, and didn't stop until Gibraltar. 'I get very scared driving – I've been stopped twice for driving too slowly. I kept hoping there would be a gap in the road, but there wasn't. So I decided to keep going.'
- D An Ohio woman, Addie Crawley, got a shock when her exhusband who had been missing for 20 years suddenly appeared from his cubbyhole hiding place in their former marital home. Thinking 48-year-old Ben Holmes was a ghost, Crawley drew her .22 hand gun and shot him. He survived, later explaining in court that he had lived in the same house as his ex for several years, but hid himself whenever she was around. He had emerged to claim his share of the property.
- E Novice climber Leonardo Diaz got stranded in a freak blizzard 12,500 feet up in the Andes. The Colombian tried to call for help on his mobile phone, but discovered that his pay-as-you-go credit had run out. Just when he had resigned himself to freezing to death, he received a call – from a telemarketer at his phone company, wondering if he'd like to buy more minutes. Diaz explained the situation, and she alerted the emergency services. She and her colleagues then took turns to ring Diaz to keep his spirits up until help arrived seven hours later.
- F An American housewife is offering psychic consultations to troubled pets. Carol Schultz, who claims she can speak the language of animals, charges $50 a session to counsel cats, dogs and horses. Satisfied customers include a dog which was Hitler in a past life and slept all the time to escape depression, and a dog which was trapped in a cat's body.

- b Are these sentences true (T) or false (F), according to the articles?

Audio script

UNIT 1 RECORDING 1

- A: I've lived in a big city here in Brazil for the last ten years, but I was brought up in the country. I much prefer living in a big conurbation like this as I think it teaches you tolerance. In your day-to-day life, you come into contact with a whole host of different types of people, and you get to understand their situation a lot better than if you lived a closed off, more sheltered life in the country.
- B: Country for me, every time. Here, we have space to live our lives like real people. I can go for a walk in the fresh air, my dog has plenty of space to run around in and we can see the stars at night. What you city folk don't understand is that we don't have to live on top of each other, and were never meant to.
- C: It's much cheaper to live in the country. In terms of property prices, for the same amount as a one-bedroom apartment in New York, I could afford a four-bedroom house with a garden and a pool here. And that's just the start. My grocery bill is much cheaper, as are eating out and entertaining. I can afford to drive a car, so I don't have to rely on public transport, either. All in all, it's a better quality of life here.
- D: If you want any kind of social life, then you have to live in the city.
- E: In my country, it's often a case of necessity. In the countryside, the air is clean and fresh, it's much more polluted in the cities, so that's a benefit of living rurally, but there just isn't any work there. For me, quality of life depends on finding work. Since I'm an engineer, this has to be the city for now.
- F: I would say any discussion of whether one is better than the other just oversimplifies the issue. When I was little, for example, I used to love living in the country. I could go and play for hours in the fields and forests near where we lived. In the summer holidays, I would go out with friends on our bikes and only come back for dinner. But as I got older, I found there just wasn't enough to do, and it was pretty dull, so I moved to Toronto, which is much more exciting. I can see myself moving back to the country when I'm older and I want to settle down and maybe have kids myself. So surely it depends more on your age than anything else?
- G: People talk to each other more in the country. In the village where I live, every time you leave your house you'll see one of your neighbours, and we always stop and say 'hello', and have a chat. Not only that, but we have regular get-togethers, such as the village barbecue, in the summer. You really feel part of a community, and you just don't get that in the city.
- H: I have two small children, and wouldn't dream of bringing them up in the city. Every day, the news is full of reports of children going missing, violent attacks, robberies, and the like. It seems to me that you can't go out of your front door in the city without facing some kind of danger. No, it's much better to bring up children in the country, where they can play outside without fear.

Over the last few hours, hundreds of delegates from all over the world have been arriving for the J12 meeting of leading industrialised nations, which this year is taking place in the quiet Canadian mountain resort of Kanalgirie. The President of the J12, Bernard Leroy, will be delivering the opening address when the conference opens tomorrow morning. The Canadian police, who have been preparing for the event since late last year, are taking huge precautions to avoid the violence which marked last year's summit in Berlin. They have thrown an 18-kilometre security cordon around the area, and last night they were not allowing anyone to pass through - including journalists who usually have full access to the delegates. From tomorrow, police will also be blocking all mobile phone signals - to prevent bombs being triggered by remote control, a police spokesman said last night. 'The politicians here seem to be isolating themselves from the free press,' said one journalist. 'There's no doubt that governments are becoming more and more security conscious and less and less concerned with personal freedom. It's getting harder and harder for us to gain access to the people who, over the next few days, will be making decisions which will affect all our lives ... and that's something that should concern us all.'

UNIT 2 RECORDING 2

The first thing that struck me was that everything was so small. The roads were really narrow, and the traffic weaved its way between tall, thin buildings, which looked like they'd been squeezed into the street like wafers in a chocolate biscuit. The elongated, red, double-decker buses snaked carefully between the avenues and main roads, picking up and dropping off their fares like ants on their way to fulfilling their daily purpose, whatever that might be. It felt really strange, as though I was looking at the world through odd-coloured spectacles - although I was seeing the same, familiar street corners and places that I'd known for most of my life, this time they didn't feel familiar.

It was so different to how I'd expected it to be. I'd loved most of the two years I'd spent in Volgograd, in the south of Russia, but in those last few months I'd realised that what made me enjoy it was partly - and it was a large part - the knowledge that I'd soon be returning home, to the family and friends I knew and loved, and the milder (though still often awful) weather London had to offer. The time I'd spent on the steppe had been a real eye-opener as far as experiencing a different culture was concerned. When I'd first arrived, fresh off the plane at Sheremetvevo Airport in Moscow, I'd been all too eager to make friends, and went out of my way to be polite wherever I could. Most of the time, my attempts to strike up conversation were met with icy stares and brusque, one-word replies. I'd started to think that Russians were a cold people, and I was unlikely to ever make any new friends.

'I think you're not having a good time here' was how Ludmilla, the secretary at the school where I was working, invited me for dinner with her family. 'You will come for dinner with my family on Sunday, I won't take no for an answer.' I was so relieved. When I turned up, flowers and wine in hand, I was enveloped in warm handshakes, inviting hugs, warm laughter and murmurs of 'ochen priyatna' (very pleased to meet you). The meal was eaten, a few toasts were drunk and by the end we were discussing our deepest wishes, fears and hopes for the future. Whether that was partly due to the vodka we drank, I'm not sure, but I do know it was largely because Russians are actually warm, friendly people, but just too proud to wear their hearts on their sleeves with people they don't know.

Another thing I'd learnt about Russians is the way the men show their respect for women, both young and old. One day, I had a rather unfortunate incident on the bus. I'd been sitting there, minding my own business, deeply engrossed in the book I was reading, when I started to notice a quiet murmuring all around me. I looked around, and noticed how the people to my left and behind me were looking across at me with disdain and whispering to each other. In front of me was a young woman, looking at me in disgust. Just when I was about to ask, in my broken (at that point crippled, in fact) Russian if something was wrong, a man in front of me got up and offered his seat to the young woman, whose face transformed in an instant to an angelic smile as she accepted, and sat down. I had been so ashamed I got off at the next stop and walked the extra six blocks home.

Now, back in London, this place that used to feel like home but now looked somewhat artificial, I had suddenly found myself in the same position. There I was on the bus, and a smartly-dressed young woman got on. Looking round, I noticed with a panic that there were no other seats free. Proud of what I'd learnt, I eagerly leapt to my feet and offered my seat. When she looked surprised and told me she was 'OK, thanks', I was mortified. I felt like a balloon that had deflated prematurely, and I instantly blushed bright red. Once more, I got off early and walked. It was going to take a while to get back into the swing of things.

UNIT 3 RECORDING 1

The Delhi-based charity End Affluenza Now has this week launched a fleet of 'mobile affluenza clinics', with the aim of reaching out to India's emerging middle classes in order to educate them about the perils of what is seen as a very 21st-century 'disease'. The organisation hopes that by likening the condition to a disease, bringing it out into the open, naming it and generally de-mystifying it, they can help raise awareness of what they argue is one of the widest-reaching 'afflictions' of our time.

So what is 'affluenza'? The organisation describes it as a form of extreme materialism, resulting in the need to accumulate wealth and consumer goods at a scale which is out of control. In its most extreme form, it's known as 'sudden-wealth syndrome' and often experienced by people who have made or won large amounts of money (such as lottery winners). Many sufferers feel that their financial success leaves them with an empty feeling, which can only be fulfilled with the accumulation of more wealth, which in turn becomes a self-perpetuating spiral. In the past, it was only a concern for the very richest levels of society, but in a country where the average salary has risen by 14 percent over the last decade (18 percent for IT professionals), combined with a push towards aggressive marketing by the world's major brands into this 'promising' new economy, it now affects an estimated forty percent of the population.

'Symptoms' of the disease include workaholism, or finding more and more of your time consumed by a job you hate, low self-esteem, an addiction to chaos, aiming to buy consumer goods which you derive little or no satisfaction from, and a false sense of entitlement.

Sceptics argue that the country has far more pressing issues to deal with than this. 'It's ludicrous that time and resources are being spent on these pathetic issues, when there are people in different parts of the country struggling to feed their families every day, or without access to clean drinking water,' says Shriya Dutta, a community outreach worker. 'Perhaps those worried about whether they can afford that new fifty-inch TV should think about donating some of that money to more worthwhile causes."

The organisation's strategy with the mobile clinics is twofold. Firstly, they hope to raise awareness of the problem and its effects. Secondly, they aim to offer practical advice in order to help families reclaim fulfilment with their 'real lives'. This advice includes, among other tips, using cash or debit cards rather than credit cards to limit spending, keeping records of what you spend, and using them in order to form realistic budgets, planning shopping trips to avoid impulse buys, and following the 'three Rs' - Reuse, Repair, Recycle.

Reactions so far have been mixed. While some have found the advice a useful antidote to the inescapable daily bombardment of big-brand marketing, others are less hopeful. 'It's all very well them telling us to work less,' says Jitesh Chopra, a systems analyst from Mumbai, 'but if I don't put in the hours, then someone else will, and before I know it, I'll be out of a job. What's needed is a more wide-reaching change, that cuts to the heart of society as we know it.'

For city dwellers in the summer months, the hotter it gets, the greater the danger from air pollution. But did you know that eating strawberries is one of the easiest ways of resisting air pollution? They are rich in pollution-busting ellagic acid ... and what could be nicer than a delicious bowl of strawberries on a hot summer's day? There's nothing worse than an attack of sunburn ... so no one should go out into the sun without plenty of factor 30. But the more fruit and vegetables you eat - particularly mangos, sweet potatoes, carrots and apricots - the more resistant your skin becomes to the sun's harmful rays. And the best thing about this form of sun protection is that it tastes a lot better than sun cream, too! What could be better for cooling off than an afternoon at the swimming pool? But be careful - the more time you spend in the water, the more likely it is that you'll be exposed to water-borne bacteria, which can cause ear and throat infections. If you're in and out of the swimming pool every few minutes, Xylitol, a natural sweetener from a birch tree, is among the most effective protectors - and you can buy it in chewinggum form - so the more you chew, the healthier you'll be!

Seventy is the new sixty, so they say, and with average life expectancy more than double what it was just over a hundred years ago, there's no escaping the fact that we are now living longer. But there are some people who take that even further, proving that age really is no limit to what you can achieve. Meet some people who think they've found the secret to staying young.

Örvendek! Pleased to meet you! A few years back, I went on a sightseeing holiday to Budapest, and I instantly fell in love with this beautiful city.

Audio script

I loved everything about it – the history, culture, people. So I decided to try learning the language. It was really tough at first, as Hungarian is very different from most other European languages in the way words are formed and the grammatical cases, so I was learning quite a lot of rather new concepts. But I've kept it up, and nowadays I use online video chat to have lessons twice a week with a teacher based in Hungary. She's quite strict with me and sets me regular homework (it's like being back at school again sometimes!), but it's great and keeps my mind active. I also think I've proved that it's never too late to learn something new!

For me it's all about the company you keep. I have a great group of friends, all of whom are 'young'. By that I don't mean they have fewer miles on the clock than me (in fact the opposite is true), but that they simply have a fresh attitude to things. You won't ever hear any of them say things like 'I'm too old for that' or 'you wouldn't catch me doing that at my age'. We all share the same outlook – that it's there for living, so we get together every week and try something new. Last week we went bowling, and this week we're going to try paintballing! You can look back at what's happened to you over the years, or you can look ahead at the years to come. I choose the latter.

It sounds obvious, I know, but the best way to stay young and healthy is exercise. I started running in my late fifties, and I still run now, but not as far as I used to. I go twice or three times a week and usually manage about three kilometres. I love it – it's like a lifeline for me. My doctor says I have the metabolism and physical fitness of a 50-year-old, but it's not just that it keeps my body in shape and working, it's what it does for me mentally, too. The buzz you get when you get the blood moving round the body like this is when you feel truly alive, and I think that's the same whatever your age is. My advice to other people my age would be to get outside and get moving, even if it's only a short distance each day.

When I retired a few years ago, I'd never been abroad. I'd always wanted to visit Rome, and try Italian food in Italy. I'd heard so much about it from my children and it sounded wonderful, so a couple of years back, I thought 'What the heck!' and booked a two-week holiday. Needless to say I had a great time. I loved everything about it – the sights, the food, the people, the feeling of immersing yourself in another culture. Well, since then, I've 'caught the bug', as they say, and I've been all over Europe. The only thing that holds me back is my pension. I love travelling and I think this time of life is a great time to do it. There's less pressure to get to see all the places you think you have to, and more time to relax and soak up the atmosphere. My dream now is to visit somewhere further afield. I'd love to visit Japan, for example.

UNIT 5 RECORDING 1

If someone you know asks you nosey questions, then you are not obliged to answer if you don't want to. Here it is more important that you have some polite brush-off, but it is still not rude for you to refuse and it would be rude for the other person to press you.

If you think they shouldn't have asked the question ('How much money do you earn?', 'Are you pregnant yet?', 'Are you and John still in love?'), then I strongly recommend looking very shocked and saying 'I can't believe you just asked me that!' and either leaving them to stumble out of it or moving on yourself to another, perhaps related, subject. If they try to press you, as opposed to defending themselves lamely and saying 'I was just interested ...', then you can keep the shocked look and say 'I'm not telling you that'

with as much emphasis as you like on the 'you'.

But what if the question isn't quite so unforgivable? You don't want to answer it ('How much did you pay for that?', 'Are you having a relationship with him?', 'Where did you buy that?' - these are strictly subjective examples, by the way: you can decide for yourself what questions go into what categories). Or supposing the really awful question came from someone you don't feel you can be too hard on (elderly relative, boss). Then you need a more smiling response: 'I can't possibly tell you that' or 'I'm not telling anyone that' or 'Wouldn't you like to know?' or 'That's none of your business'. Any of these, if said with a cheerful face, should get you out of it. As ever, if people press, then they have lost the right to a polite answer. Some people really don't understand why you won't tell them. 'But I'd tell you', they say. You must just answer 'I never tell anyone that kind of thing' until they get the message. But you must stand firm, because otherwise they'll never learn and will keep expecting you to tell them your innermost secrets. There is certainly never any need to tell your secrets just because someone else told theirs.

There are questions that seem perfectly reasonable – 'Are you planning to move?', 'Are you going to go back to work?', 'Are you going on holiday this year?' – but if answered truthfully might lead to minefields or unexpected (and maybe unwanted) revelations of bankruptcy, pregnancy, redundancy, divorce, etc. Here you are free to tell white lies and say 'We don't know / haven't decided yet / haven't really thought about it'. Looking vague and serene and changing the subject is the key here. You generally find that people did leap to conclusions, but they were the wrong ones ('I was convinced that meant you were getting married, not splitting up') and nothing to worry about. If the question was reasonable, then it's polite to embarrass the asker as little as possible – they were probably only making conversation in the first place.

Knowledge, according to the proverb, is power. And in this electronic age, more and more of our information is gained not in the classroom, but via media such as the Internet, DVD and cable TV ... all of which are playing a key part in the distance learning revolution. Here are three figures in this key educational change which is transforming our lives in the 21st century.

The Pitman shorthand system

Those who think that distance learning is a relatively new idea might be surprised to learn that English educator, Sir Isaac Pitman, had the same idea – only then they were called correspondence courses – more than 150 years ago. Taking advantage of the development of a reliable postal system in 1840, Pitman began teaching shorthand by mail to thousands of students who did not have time to attend school. 'Lessons' consisted of copying short passages of the Bible in shorthand, and posting them to Mr Pitman to be corrected. His brother, Benn Pitman, introduced the idea to the United States, and the Pitman shorthand system – which has been adapted to fifteen other languages – is still one of the most widely used shorthand systems in the world.

The Open University

When it was established in 1969, the Open University offered courses via mail, with the back-up of regular TV and radio programmes shown outside normal broadcast times. Each student was assigned a tutor who discussed the coursework over the phone, and in group sessions in the evenings or at weekends.

Thirty years on, the Open University has expanded to include the Internet, video-conferencing, satellite broadcast and email. There are no entry qualifications or admission interviews, and anyone over the age of eighteen can follow one of their courses. It is now Britain's largest single teaching institution, with more than 200,000 people studying its courses every year, with another 16,000 in other countries around the world.

John Hendricks and the Discovery Channel

After a successful career in university education, John S. Hendricks entered the TV business and launched the Discovery Channel – the first cable TV channel exclusively devoted to documentaries and nature programmes – in June 1985. Today, the company's programmes reach over 150 million subscribers in more than a hundred countries. In an age where competition for TV audiences has never been tougher, the Discovery Channel's high-quality, educational approach continues to defy those who believe that TV is only about mindless entertainment. The BBC programme Walking with Dinosaurs became the most-watched documentary in TV history when it was shown on the Discovery Channel in 2000.

UNIT 6 RECORDING 2

Around the world, hundreds, if not thousands, of species of animals are threatened with extinction ... but the latest scientific developments could mean that one day even extinct animals will be brought back to life using DNA technology. The last-known Tasmanian tiger died in a zoo in Hobart, Australia, in 1936. Fifty years later, the species was declared extinct. But in 1999, a research project into DNA cloning was set up at the Australian Museum in Sydney, and now, high quality DNA has been extracted from a baby tiger which has been preserved in a jar of alcohol since 1866. According to scientists, there is now a chance of the Tasmanian tiger being resurrected using techniques similar to those which were used to create cloned sheep in the 1990s. If undamaged DNA is recovered, it could be inserted into the empty egg of a related living species, such as a Tasmanian Devil.

However, the technology for the final stage of cloning – where the Tasmanian tiger's DNA will be placed into a Tasmanian Devil host which has been stripped of its own genetic material – is still to be developed.

'It's a very significant breakthrough,' said Professor Michael Archer, Professor of Zoology at the University of New South Wales. 'Although there's still a lot of work to be done, there's now a real possibility of Tasmanian tigers being released into the wild.'

- B: Do you mind if we stay in? I really am tired.
- 5 A: Why did you say that? You don't have to pretend you like Kate's cooking.
  - B: But I really do like it!
- 6 A: Did you ask Ania out then?
- B: Yes, and she said 'no'. Do I feel embarrassed now.

UNIT 7 RECORDING 3

A single working mother in her mid-thirties, Nicole Kidman could have either slipped into career apathy or forged ahead stubbornly. It will surprise no one that she opted for the latter, and quite spectacularly so. As she carved out a new persona, complete with both feminist and romantic overtones, not to mention a major image overhaul, the world took the courageous actress to its heart. Almost by default, the divorcee became an inspirational role model for women everywhere.

Setting out to prove the point that she could get along just fine without her famous husband, yet admitting on occasion that she was struggling to cope, Nicole's frankness was refreshing and appealing in equal measure. She never stopped giving interviews and her gradual acceptance of her new life could be clearly traced as the year progressed.

After eleven years of wearing flat shoes to avoid towering over Tom Cruise, the statuesque star famously charmed her public by gleefully giggling 'I can wear heels now!' when quizzed on the benefits of being single. Suddenly she became a style icon for a new generation.

Clothes shopping with girlfriends was now one of her favourite pursuits. But Nicole's sartorial tastes hadn't actually changed all that much from the days she spent trawling round flea markets. 'I think clothes are creative. It's wonderful when someone like John Galliano has the ability to change the way people think of clothes or how they dress on a global level. Fashion is incredibly relevant. There's something admirable about boldness, because with boldness comes the opportunity to fail. But it's becoming harder now, because when you fail, people judge it so severely.'

A practical mum, Nicole is a 'bike shorts and sloppy joe' person around the house. 'It's like leading two different lives,' she jokes. 'I have my life, then I have this sort of fantasy life – going to premieres and putting on make-up and beautiful dresses.'

Thanks to all the extra exposure with Moulin Rouge!, The Others and also her very public divorce, Nicole's eclectic taste in clothes, her paleness and her long-legged figure have become fashionable, something which she finds most amusing. 'Believe me, my body is only OK,' she laughs.' I get by, but it's not great. I have a boy's body, and I would rather look like a girl. Moulin Rouge! was all about corsets and padding.'

- A: he said.
- C: Yes, Your Honour. But I can honestly say I haven't done anything like this before, and it will definitely never happen again. I only did it because my wife desperately needed a new dress.
- A: The judge looked at his case notes for a few moments.
- B: I see. So why then did you break into the store again on the 12th, 13th and 14th of October?
- C: Because my wife made me change the dress three times.

UNIT 8 RECORDING 1

My daughter was singing as she polished the furniture. I hadn't asked her to polish the furniture. I never do. But where one brother is happiest with the computer, one with a football and one with a model car, her idea of bliss is a can of Spring Fresh and a duster. Where have I gone wrong?

While the boys have to be nagged, bribed or tricked into doing their infinitesimal share of the household chores, and can't be seen when they think they're finished, she's up on a chair with the washing-up liquid before you can say 'dishes', scrubbing at pans as if her life depended on it.

Being a bit of a tomboy myself, and not too hot on the domestic skills, I used to argue till I was blue in the face that the differences between men and women were all about upbringing and expectations. Nobody could have approached motherhood with a grittier determination that all children would be treated the same, not channelled along some pre-ordained path. Boys would be offered soft toys to cuddle, girls would play with cars and trains. I would breed the New Men and female engineers of the future.

I dare say there are indeed small boys and girls who do such things, but not mine. The hubris awaiting me was a family in which every politically incorrect stereotype in the book is rife.

Ten years ago, as I gazed at my first-born in his cradle, I fantasised about the gentle soul he would be. No guns or nasty aggression for this little peach blossom. He would be taught to turn away wrath with a swift word. He would grow up to be Secretary General of the United Nations.

The fantasy sustained me until he was about two, when he proudly presented me with his first model – a rifle. Later on, at playgroup, he and his pals daily assassinated each other. In the garden, he and his brother began doing such heart-stopping things with sticks that in the end I bought them a couple of plastic swords.

We went downhill fast. A decade and three more sons after those early children, we now house an arsenal of swords, rifles, water pistols, bows and arrows, hatchets, daggers and tanks that would be the envy of the British Army. Not so long ago, we were all nearly arrested when a most life-like revolver in our luggage caused a security scare at Heathrow Airport.

And what of my daughter, the lone sandwiched sister? She plays all the boys' games because she has to. You'll find her from time to time teetering around the house in plastic high heels, with a handbag (pink) in one hand and a shotgun in the other, and she can manage a tolerable dribble down the left wing when they need someone to make up the numbers for football. But her heart is not really in it. She would much rather be drawing or writing or cutting out stars or polishing shells or – dear heavens – cleaning the bathroom while waves of boys surge and roar around her.

I finally faced up to the fact that boys and girls are simply born different on the day, a few years ago, when I was hanging out the washing and gave her and the next brother up a couple of clothes pegs to play with. He shot me with his. She cradled it in her arms and sang it a lullaby.

But I won't give up. I'll continue to try and treat them equally and expect the same of them. And by the time they're all in their teens, I imagine they'll all be equally impossible to get to do anything. But right now, nature is wearing down nurture. Equality is hard work.

UNIT 9 RECORDING 1

Parents are often warned of the perils of modern technology for their children. Not only do they need to make sure children stay safe online, limit the amount of time they spend playing video games, as well as screen time in general, but also avoid falling into the 'communication trap', whereby kids start to favour written over oral communication. While these are all real concerns, very little is said about the benefits technology can bring to parents themselves. Although many core values and aims are the same, modern parenting often requires a different approach than it did for our parents' generation. It's not about completely changing the game, but there are a few ways in which tech-savvy parents can use modern technology to their advantage.

- 1 One way of ensuring the kids help with housework is to change the household wi-fi password every morning (or the night before). Give your children a list of simple chores to do before they can have access to it, e.g. make the bed, take the rubbish out, etc.
- 2 Video chat can be an excellent way of keeping in touch with the extended family, especially if they live on the other side of the world. It's unlikely that grandparents will be there for every school performance, or when that tooth comes out, but with video chat they'll be able to see it. Rather than your child telling them over the phone, they can show them over the Internet.
- 3 Texting is a great way to stay in touch with teenagers while they're out with friends. A simple 'How's it going?' can be much less invasive than a phone call, and easier for them to respond to, especially if they want to avoid the embarrassment of mum or dad checking up on them when they're with friends. And that's not to mention the benefits of maps, taxi apps, etc. Taking time to look for and download apps with your child is a great way to spend some time together in an activity which he or she will find motivating, too.
- 4 There's a wealth of information out there on the Internet, but not all of it is reliable. Set your child simple tasks, by picking up on rumours they've heard (about celebrities, for example) and asking them to see if they can find at least three sources which say the same thing. Ask them to tell you which they think is most reliable, and why. Developing these skills will go a long way in helping prepare your child for today's modern world.
- 5 It can be easy to feel isolated as a parent sometimes, especially when it's 'them against you'. Luckily, nowadays there are a myriad of forums and online communities out there which can help you with both moral and practical support. Sometimes you won't even need to join a community, and can often find discussions on quite complex subjects with a simple Internet search. The important thing to remember is that you're not alone, and technology makes this more possible than ever before.

A: Hey, Rick.

- B: Hi, Olga, thanks for coming over. I'm having terrible trouble with my laptop. Do you think you can help?
- A: I don't know, I can try. What's wrong?
- B: Well it's crashed. The screen's blank and it's making a weird noise.
- A: Yes, I can see. Have you tried turning it off and on again?
- B: No, I wasn't sure if I could. Won't that damage it?
- A: Yes, you're right. It might not be a good idea. OK, let's try holding down 'Alt', 'Ctrl' and 'Delete' ... No, nothing. Hmm ... have you installed any new software recently?
- B: Yes, well, this morning it threw up an error message, saying that I needed to update the operating system. I did that, then it asked me to reboot it, so I did that, too. Then this happened.
- A: Oh dear. Have you backed up all your files to an external hard disk? B: No, why?
- A: It looks like a problem with your hard drive. The only thing we can do now is reset the computer. It means you might lose everything though.
- B: Oh dear.

UNIT 10 RECORDING 1

Brittney Pringle, a nine-month-old baby from Perth, Australia, made her parents rich the moment she spoke her first words. 'Brittney gave us a couple of goo-goos and ga-gas and then blurted out the numbers 9, 12, 14, 22, 31 and 39,' says proud mum, Dorcas Pringle. 'We ran out and bought the lottery ticket – and now our Brittney's going to grow up as the world's youngest self-made millionaire. I can't explain how she did what she did, but we are determined she's going to lead a normal life.'

New Yorker Alvin Eykers is divorcing his wife Judith because her psychic powers put too much strain on their marriage. 'She'd finish my sentences before I got the words halfway out of my mouth,' says Eykers.'I could never surprise her with a gift for Christmas or her birthday and I could never get away with even the littlest white lie. It was like she had a peephole into my mind.' The crisis came when Judith accused him of having an affair with his firm's receptionist. Eykers insists, 'I haven't touched her or even said two words to her – yet.'

A British motorist lost her way during a day trip to Calais and drove eight hundred miles across Europe looking for somewhere to turn round. Vivienne Vanderwault-Hudson, who had been shopping for cigarettes and alcohol, headed down the motorway, crossed the Pyrenees into Spain, and didn't stop until Gibraltar. 'I get very scared driving – I've been stopped twice for driving too slowly. I kept hoping there would be a gap in the road, but there wasn't. So I decided to keep going.'

An Ohio woman, Addie Crawley, got a shock when her ex-husband – who had been missing for twenty years – suddenly appeared from his cubbyhole hiding place in their former marital home. Thinking 48-year-old Ben Holmes was a ghost, Crawley drew her .22 hand gun and shot him. He survived, later explaining in court that he had lived in the same house as his ex for several years, but hid himself whenever she was around. He had emerged to claim his share of the property.

Novice climber Leonardo Diaz got stranded in a freak blizzard 12,500 feet up in the Andes. The Colombian tried to call for help on his mobile phone, but discovered that his pay-as-you-go credit had run out. Just when he had resigned himself to freezing to death, he received a call – from a telemarketer at his phone company, wondering if he'd like to buy more minutes. Diaz explained the situation, and she alerted the emergency services. She and her colleagues then took turns to ring Diaz to keep his spirits up until help arrived seven hours later.

An American housewife is offering psychic consultations to troubled pets. Carol Schultz, who claims she can speak the language of animals, charges $50 a session to counsel cats, dogs and horses. Satisfied customers include a dog which was Hitler in a past life and slept all the time to escape depression, and a dog which was trapped in a cat's body.

UNIT 10 RECORDING 2

- A: Careful! You nearly knocked over that poor cyclist.
- B: Sorry. It's not easy to look at the road and the map at the same time.
- A: Well, I did offer to map-read, but you wouldn't let me.
- B: Because you always get us lost. Or you did last time, anyway.
- A: No, I didn't! You wouldn't listen to me!
- B: Never mind. Are there any more sweets? Can I have one?
- A: No, you can't. You ate the last one an hour ago.
- B: Pity we didn't get some more when we stopped for petrol.
- A: Just a minute. Did that sign say Crawley ten miles?
- B: I think so. Why?
- A: Because it means we're going in the wrong direction!

UNIT 10 RECORDING 3

- 1
  - A: Hello? B: Josie? Is that you?! It's Mum!
  - A: Hang on a minute ... Hi, Mum, how are you?
  - B: I'm OK, how's the study session going? Are you and Susie working hard?
  - A: Oh yes, it's fine. We were just having a break and listening to some music.
  - B: Hmm, right. Because I just had a phone call from Susie's parents.
  - A: Oh dear. Um ... What did they say?
  - B: Josie, you're not at their house, are you?
  - A: Um ... no. We're at the pub.
  - B: I've told you not to go there! I think you'd better come home straightaway.
- A: Yes, Mum.
  - A: It's funny, isn't it?
  - B: What is?
  - A: Well, it's always the politicians who go on about honesty that end up being the most dishonest.
  - B: Why do you say that?
  - A: Have you seen this story in the news?
  - B: Which one?
  - A: The one about the Health Minister. Apparently, he was caught lying in a report on last year's budget.
  - B: Really, how did they find that out?
  - A: Well apparently, one of his staff decided to go to the media and reveal that he'd been lying. She said she couldn't go on covering for him after his campaign the previous year on making government more transparent.
  - B: Oh yes, I remember that. He was quite enthusiastic about the whole thing, wasn't he?

UNIT 10 RECORDING 4

It was you who suggested that we invite them ... not me!

UNIT 10 RECORDING 5

- 1 They seem to have mentioned everyone except me.
- 2 The new medication has made him feel much better, but it didn't help her very much.
- 3 You might not want to see him, but / certainly do.
- 4 I just don't know what on earth we can tell him ... maybe your uncle can help.
- 5 If you see Andy again, ask him to call me instead of Mr Bernard.
- 6 It's Frank who's the problem: if we could persuade him, the rest would be easy.
- 7 Was it you who I spoke to the other day?
- 8 It doesn't matter what she thinks it's what you think that worries me.
- 9 I don't know about you, but I've had enough of this.
- 10 Apparently they're going to ban cars in the town centre. What will we do then?

Pupils who have been enrolled for exams at a Nottingham school will be fed a diet of bananas and classical music. Teachers at Kensal Green Girls' School hope their students' brain power will be increased by the special regime. When she was interviewed on local television, head teacher Sarah Weaver said, 'Every girl will be given a banana on exam mornings to help them get their brains into gear.' Soothing classical music - which is played at low volume through concealed speakers - is believed to calm candidates' nerves and put them in a relaxed frame of mind as they enter the examination hall. The experiment - which is based on similar techniques used in US universities - is likely to be imitated in other Nottingham schools if it is found to be successful.

'So you admit breaking into Carla's Fashion Store on October 11th last year?' he said.

'Yes, Your Honour. But I can honestly say I haven't done anything like this before, and it will definitely never happen again. I only did it because my wife desperately needed a new dress."

The judge looked at his case notes for a few moments.

'I see. So why then did you break into the store again on the 12th, 13th and 14th of October?"

'Because my wife made me change the dress three times.'

- 2 The standard of teaching seems to be getting worse.
- 3 The town's importance is slowly decreasing.
- 4 Fewer and fewer people are taking holidays abroad.
- 5 We have more and more time to ourselves these days.
- 6 Julio's English seems to be slowly getting worse.
- 7 The difference between the two groups is becoming more and more blurred.

8 The days are getting shorter and shorter.

- B: I'm sorry. It's not easy to look at the road and the map at the same time.

A: Well, I did offer to map-read, but you wouldn't let me map-read.
B: Because you always get us lost. Or you did get us lost last time, anyway.

- A: No, I didn't get us lost! You wouldn't listen to me!
- B: Never mind. Are there any more sweets? Can I have one a sweet?
- A: No, you can't have a sweet. You ate the last one sweet an hour ago.
- B: It's a pity we didn't get some more sweets when we stopped for petrol.
- A: Just a minute. Did that sign say Crawley ten miles?
- B: I think so it said Crawley ten miles. Why?
- A: Because it means we're going in the wrong direction!

CUTTING EDGE

NEW EDITION

Cutting Edge Advanced New Edition builds on the distinctive task-based approach that has made this course so popular. Engaging texts, new video content and a comprehensive digital package are just some of the features that make this fully revised edition even more effective.

The Workbook contains a wide variety of practice exercises that review all the language areas studied in the Students' Book:

- Grammar, vocabulary and pronunciation exercises help to consolidate new language.
- Functional and writing exercises build on the Language live lessons.
- Listen and read sections extend learners' skills.
