Vivienne Westwood

queen of fashion

Vivienne Westwood is a fashion designer. She was born in 1941 in the north of England. When she was 17, her family moved to London. She went to art school but she didn't become an artist ... she became a teacher and got a job at a primary school. At the same time, she made jewellery and sold it in a market.

In 1961, Vivienne met Derek Westwood and they got married. They had a son, Ben, in 1963, but Vivienne and Derek didn't stay together. She met Malcolm McLaren, a businessperson and music manager, and they had a son, Joseph, in 1967.

Vivienne left her job as a teacher in 1971 and started a business with Malcolm McLaren. She designed clothes in the punk era of the 1970s and sold them in their first shop in London. She continued to design clothes and she bought other shops in the UK, Milan, Paris and Los Angeles.

For thirty years, she lived in a small flat, but in 2000, she bought a big house in London with her new husband, fashion designer Andreas Kronthaler. In 1990 and 1991, she won a prize, British Designer of the Year, and in 2005, she had a big show to celebrate her long career as a fashion designer.

Transatlantic travel-the facts

Before the 1800s, people travelled across the Atlantic Ocean in boats – sailing boats. The journeys often took many weeks and they were very dangerous. In the 19th century, large ships began to cross the Atlantic. The journeys weren't so dangerous and they usually took several days, not weeks. An American ship called United States made a world-record journey in 1952 – crossing the Atlantic in three days, ten hours and 40 minutes.

In 1919, a British plane became the first plane to cross the Atlantic without stopping. The journey took about 72 hours. In 1927, the first passenger plane went across the ocean and in the 1930s, Germany started flying planes across the Atlantic with 60 passengers at a time.

Now, about 600 planes travel across the Atlantic every day and the average flight time from London to New York is six hours and 30 minutes. There are plans for a tunnel so people can travel by train under the Atlantic. They are only plans now – but who knows about the future?
